Dear WFRN Friend,

Have you ever daydreamed about moving to Italy? :-)

Jaw-dropping art and architecture; mouth-watering comfort food; and a landscape that makes you seriously consider (if only for a moment) selling everything and moving there to sleep beneath the stars. Giuseppe Verde famously said, "You may have the universe, if I may have Italy."

And yet, as stunning as Italy is, the most beautiful things that ever happened there actually took place in small, dark spaces. Places like the shadows of the catacombs, where those who tasted and saw that God is good beyond anything this world has to offer, risked everything to meet together and worship their risen Lord. And the prison cell of Paul, from which he was inspired by God to write his final existing words: his second letter to Timothy.

The seventh verse of this epistle is the one I heard quoted most often by WFRN's founder, Ed Moore. Dad often quoted 2 Tim 1:7, "For God did not give us a spirit of fear, but of power and love and self-control." I consistently saw him exhibit these things, both in public and private, and I heard him give the credit for it to the Lord.

Take a little to time to read or listen to 2 Timothy today. And remember: you might not get to visit Italy in this brief life. You might have to settle for an occasional movie or evening at a local restaurant. But you can definitely know the powerful peace and power to love that comes from the One who loves you most.

Wishing you power, peace and love in Christ,
Doug

"Promised Land" by TobyMac

was just debuted on WFRN's New Music Monday.

The song is an homage to his grandpa who was a coal miner. TobyMac wanted to both honor his heritage and provide Eternal Hope. He says, "I've prayed over this song and asked God to do something special with it."
