Elders' Newsletter

Upward, inward and outward. That is a phrase that some Christians use to describe their relationship with God, themselves and with others. We look upward to God for our salvation, for our new identities and for the power to live for Him. We look inward to see where we need to repent of sin, receive His forgiveness and to apply His Word. And we look outward to see others and to relate to them with the fruit of the Holy Spirit and to live with others in God glorifying ways. Nowhere is this dynamic more visible than in our homes and work places. No matter our current role or responsibilities, we are all in that relational loop - upward, inward and outward. This weekend we will be looking at the roles, responsibilities and authority framework that God has designed specifically for families and workplaces. Come and join us as we see God's amazing and enduring design for the home as well as vocational settings as we continue our study in the Book of Colossians.
