

Anger

God created all of our emotions, including anger. However, there are appropriate and inappropriate ways to express anger. We must learn to deal with anger in a healthy way so that it won't control us.

Anger manifests itself in different ways. Appropriate anger responds to injustice or evil. God displays this type of anger in the Bible. It is a controlled, selfless anger. This kind of anger leads to action which exposes, diminishes or outright destroys the wrongdoing that caused it. Jesus' anger at the merchants in the temple was appropriate: "Then he entered the temple area and began driving out those who were selling. 'It is written,' he said to them, 'My house will be a house of prayer; but you have made it 'a den of robbers'" (Luke 19:45–46).

We can also express anger inappropriately, the kind of anger that seeks to repay evil for evil, exacting vengeance on others. Inappropriate anger is selfish and doesn't make things better. If it is not dealt with it will lead to bitterness that ultimately harms us.

"Refrain from anger and turn from wrath; do not fret—it leads only to evil." (Psalm 37:8)

"In your anger do not sin: Do not let the sun go down while you are still angry." (Ephesians 4:26)

"My dear brothers, take note of this: Everyone should be quick to listen, slow to speak and slow to become angry for man's anger does not bring about the righteous life that God desires." (James 1:19–20)

God does not want us to be controlled by anger, but wants us to live in freedom and peace.
