THOUGHTS ON THE JOURNEY

The call to follow Christ is a call to relationship. This relationship will be one of the most difficult, but healthy, relationships you have ever experienced. You see, when we are in relationship with others, we can pull off the great cover up. I can hide my weaknesses, my sin, and my insecurities from you. Though I can hide them, they will affect our relationship because I have not been completely transparent with you. However, I cannot play the cover up game with Jesus; He knows all.

It is this omniscient (all-knowing) of Christ that makes things both difficult and healthy.

It is this omniscient (all-knowing) of Christ that makes things both difficult and healthy. It is difficult because I must face the ugly in my life. Jesus will not let me hide my sin, He will expose it. It can be a very difficult thing to deal with our sin. It is rough, embarrassing, and sometimes painful to look at our sin. However, Jesus does not do this to bring pain, He does it to bring healing. Think of it in terms of removing a splinter, or even a tumor...it is painful, but necessary for health.

Beyond our sin, Jesus will expose our weaknesses and insecurities. Once again, this is not to bring pain or embarrassment, it is simply intended to bring them to the forefront so that we can deal with them. He wants us to know that with Him, we can overcome anything. Jesus does not want us held back by sin or by insecurity.

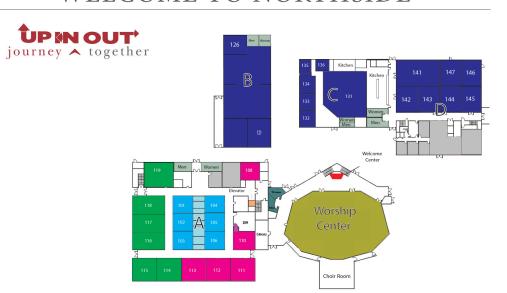

In our text today, we will see Jesus interact with His disciples. While you may not see it at first, there is a lot going on. Jesus' relationship with His disciples reveals their weaknesses, insecurities, and sin. Again, He does not do this to cause pain. He does this to prepare them for what lies ahead. In the coming days, Jesus will use these men in a very powerful way. He needs them prepared.

Jesus desires to use you as well. Regardless of your past, your sin, or your struggles, He is preparing you. The process may be painful. But know, Jesus does not allow that pain to come without purpose. Work through it. Make yourself available.

Honored to be your pastor,
