Dear Praying Friends:

Shivers run through me as I pull my blanket around me and sip my hot drink. As I listen to the approaching winter storm, I reflect upon the blessings of communion and a place to meet. Though the temperature gauges show that winter has arrived, this warm culture is ready to brave it for the smiles, hugs, and communion of Christ’s family in a dedicated facility called “home.”

After years of battling paperwork, we are meeting in our building. Though we are allowed a limited number of people, first-time visitors have been present each week. One week we had nine visitors. We hope for a good group of visitors and the return of regulars in person for our official inauguration.

Communion wasn’t limited to our weekly services. This past weekend, we held our winter teen camp. Almost all of them hadn’t been able to enter our online services regularly.

Thank You for Your Prayers,

Kelly Love

Praises:

- Completion of our building’s first phase, except for the leaking roof

- One of our girl’s was delighted by her mom’s presence. This eleven-year-old attends by herself. She rises early to read her Bible and pray before the day begins. She stays up late studying God’s Word. Her mother told me, “Though I have no interest in the Bible, I’m proud of my daughter’s desire and studying.”
