

How to register for The Gathering

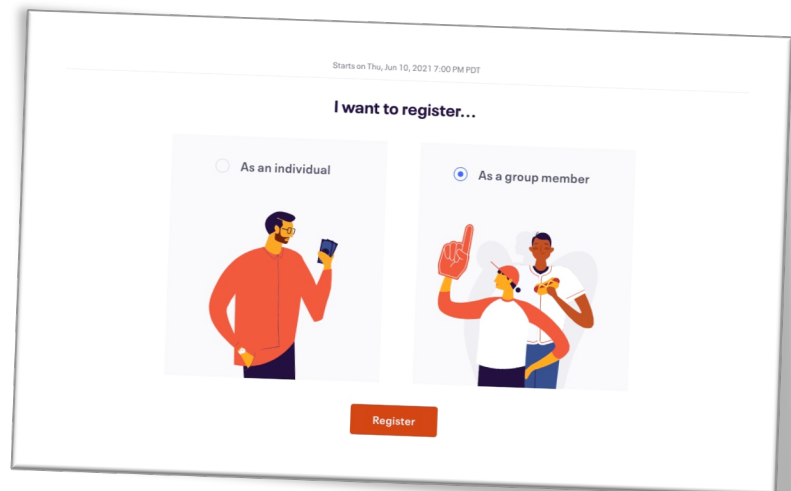

Note that there's a couple of things that go more smoothly if you're already logged in to Eventbrite at <https://www.eventbrite.ca/signin/>. To save yourself time, do that, and then come back to the link we've given our advertisement for this event.

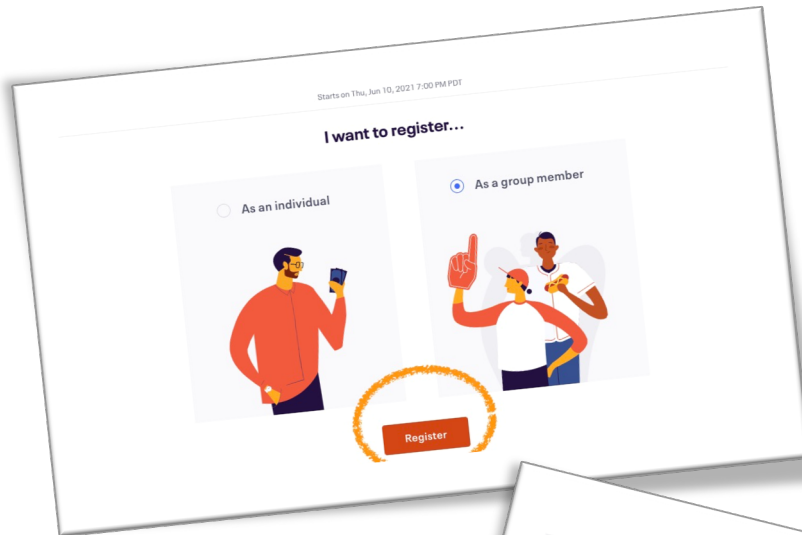

1. Click the green
“Register” button

2A. If you are coming with others who are in your bubble, under, “I want to register...,” click “As a group member”, even if you don’t have everyone’s emails. You will be sitting with those people during the event.

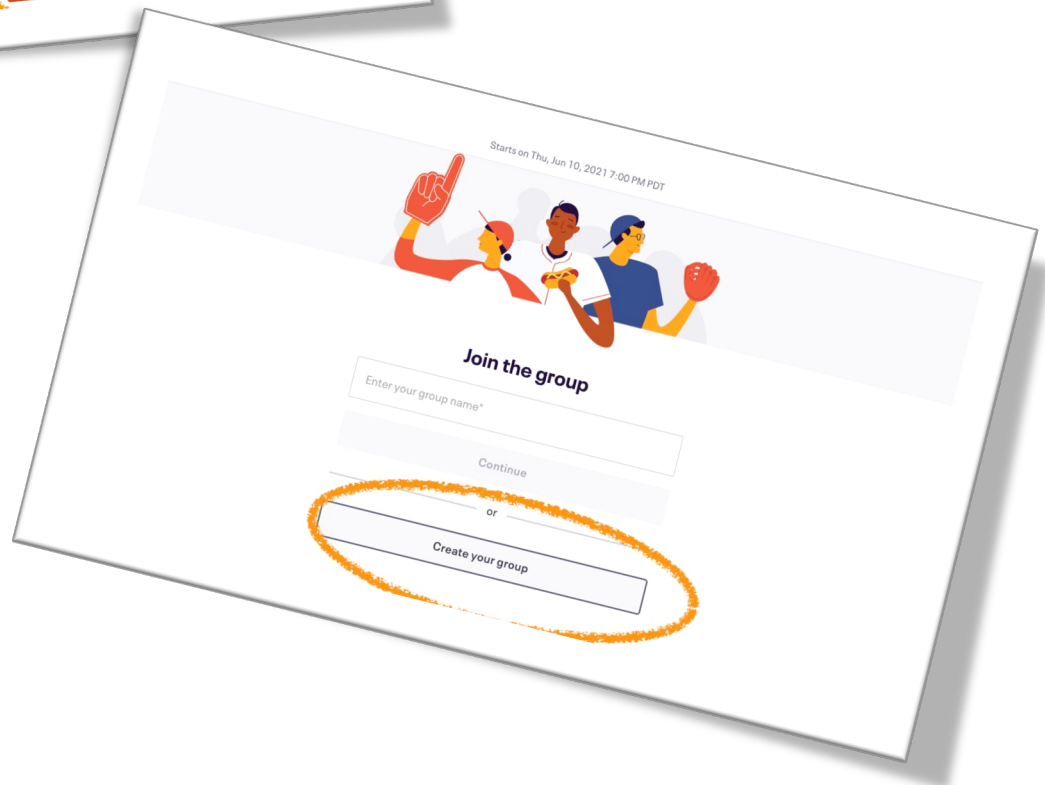

2B. If not, click, “As an individual.” If you choose this option, the rest of the registration process will go as you might expect. So, the rest of the instructions, below, don’t apply to you.

...and click on “Register”

3. Provided that you're logged in, you'll be able to choose, "Create your group". If you're not logged in, it will give the option to log in below the "Create your group" button. Hopefully you're logged in, because otherwise you'll have to do that now and probably go through this whole process again!

4. Create a group name and click, “Create a group.” It’s simplest for people serving at the event if you make it your family name. If you’re a couple, you could just put both your names, e. g., “John and Sandra McArthur.”

5. Now you’ve created your group, but you’re actually not registered for this specific event yet: You have to get your tickets. Indicate how many tickets you need by using the drop-down menu. Note that while the numbers to up to 10, Eventbrite will not actually let you get that many tickets.

6. Eventbrite will require:

a. “Contact information” for an group organizer

b. Name and email for “Registration 1” (even if it’s the same person as the group organizer)

c. The same for other persons in the group. These go under “Registration 2”, “Registration 3”, etc...

Note that in my (Mike’s) experience, Eventbrite does not require unique email addresses for each registration.

Note too that if you’re logged in, some of this information will auto-populate, as it did for me.

7. Click on “Register” and you’re done. You’ll receive an email at the email address(es) you provided.

The team (Travis Thuro, Lorelee Thiessen, Andy Park, Jason and Jackie Jantzen, Greg and Julie Smith, and Doug and Suzie Watts and myself, Mike Labun) are really looking forward to worshipping with you on Thursday!
